02 · INITIAL RECORD

What's there?

The page announces LEARNING, with definitions of learning and education below. The text examines educational patterns.

What attracts attention?

The contrast between the conference's declared intention to look forward and the page text's critical account of education as a means of reproducing existing social and economic patterns. The argument connects educational provision to the physical structures required to accommodate it, raising a question about whether architecture merely supports existing educational arrangements or might enable different ones.

03 · INVESTIGATION

Questions to investigate

1. What is the relationship between this cover text and the educational ideas developed elsewhere in AD/5/68?
2. Why does the text describe education as reinforcing existing social and economic patterns?
3. What alternative relationship between learning and physical infrastructure might the text be inviting the reader to consider?

Further examination

The page directs the reader to p.242 for the continuation of its argument.
