02 · INITIAL RECORD

What's there?

A photograph of Orchard Ridge Campus, and two columns of text discussing the need for education to accommodate change.

What attracts attention?

“GOODBYE TO THE CLASSROOM” contrasts with a photograph of a conventional educational building. The authors envisage education extending into the home, factory, office and shopping centre. Learning is presented as an activity that can be organised and adapted to individual needs and progress. The attention shifts from the school building.

03 · INVESTIGATION

Questions to investigate

1. What do the authors mean by programming principles?
2. How does the proposed approach relate to the Atom material on pp.232-235?
3. Is the emphasis on improving educational buildings or extending education beyond them?

Further examination
